Women Organize For Safety

California Women Adopt Elaborate Plans For Reduction of Street and Highway Accidents—State, District and County Directors To Be Appointed.

California women have declared war on street and highway accidents and are mobilizing their forces for a long and intensive state-wide campaign of education in safety and accident prevention, according to reports received by Secretary of Commerce Hoover as chairman of the National Conference on street and highway safety.

This campaign, which is being organized by the Women's Division of the California Development Association, will be participated in by the California State Automobile Association, the Automobile Club of Southern California, the State Parent-Teacher Association, the State Federation of Women's Clubs, the Police Departments of San Francisco and Los Angeles, representatives of railroad and transportation companies and a number of other state and local organizations. At a recent meeting held in Del Monte a large number of facts regarding conditions throughout the state were reported by the representatives of these various organizations.

Plans which were adopted at this meeting call for an organization period of fourteen weeks, during which time district chairmen of the five major districts of California will be appointed; county chairmen will be appointed by these district chairmen, local chairmen will be appointed by the county chairmen; and these local chairmen will in turn organize local safety committees. The entire work of organization is to be completed by June 1.

Starting on June 1 the various local committees will begin a six months competitive campaign to reduce street and highway accidents in their respective communities. On December 1 statistics relative to reduction in accidents will be compiled and a prize awarded to the community showing the greatest percentage of accident reduction during the six months period.

The Women's Division of the California Development Association, which is taking the lead in this movement, includes in its Advisory Committee the mayors of Los Angeles, San Diego, and San Francisco as well as police and other officials of various cities of California. It also includes representatives of several colleges and universities, automobile clubs, federations of women's clubs and other organizations. The campaign will follow recommendations adopted by the National Conference on Street and Highway Safety in which it was pointed out that "It is the community that largely controls the factors that make for a reduced accident toll."

In the report to Secretary Hoover it is stated that the campaign has for its objective "a Christmas present for the State of California in the form of statistics showing the number of lives saved to the state due to the accident prevention program."

WHO OWNS A SHOOTING STAR THAT HITS EARTH?

Press despatches tell us that the attorney general of Argentina has been wrestling with the question of the ownership of a meteorite, says the New York Law Review. "When the brilliant specks of star dust fall to earth," writes the editor of a newspaper, "escaping total combustion in the impact upon our atmosphere, there is no use advertising for the original owners. The mass of tin, nickel and iron is chiefly of value for museum display. But that is sufficient to make it worth while for the attorney general of Argentina to decide whether the nation or the landowner on whose property the meteorite falls is entitled to possession." Lacking any judicial decision in his own country, as is probable, the attorney general of Argentina should study the dictates of the decisions of the courts in the United States. Concerning these bulky volumes it has been claimed by more than one befuddled practitioner in our courts that in them may be found an authority upon every conceivable side of every conceivable subject known to the law. At all events, the ownership of meteorites has been referred to at least once that we recall, though the issue of ownership was not between the government and the landowner upon whose property the aerolite fell, but between the landowner and the person to whom the finder of the aerolite had sold it for $105. The case was decided by the Supreme Court of Iowa (96 Iowa 71) in 1892. The finder, it should be said, had been directed to the spot where the meteorite was supposed to have fallen, by one who claimed to have seen a descending streak of light. Proceeding as directed next day, a fresh excavation about three feet deep was found in a field, and the finder, one Hoagland, dug up with a spade, a boulder weighing sixty-six pounds, "of a black, smoky color on the outside, showing the effects of heat, and of a lighter and darkish gray color on the inside." There was no doubt but that it was an unearthly substance that had fallen from the heavens, and the court so found.

The owner of the soil claimed the meteorite by virtue of the ancient maxim conferring title to whatever became permanently affixed to the reality. The purchaser from the finder, claiming title through the latter, sought to justify under a no less ancient rule of "title by occupancy." Thus defined by Blackstone: "Occupancy is the taking possession of those things which before belonged to nobody," further explained as follows: "whatever movables are found upon the surface of the earth, or in the sea, and are unclaimed by any owner, are supposed to be abandoned by the last proprietor, and as such are returned to the common stock and mass of things, and therefore they belong, as in a state of nature, to the first occupant or finder." After very careful consideration, Grainger, J., who delivered the opinion of the court, reached the conclusion that for legal purposes the aerolite had become a part of the soil into which it had become imbedded, and therefore, the property of the owner of the soil; that it was not such a "movable" as became the property of the finder as "against all the world, except the true owner." The court announced this view notwithstanding a letter from a correspondent of the Albany Law Journal, (which went out of existence some years ago), published in that periodical (29 Alb. Law J. 299) calling attention to a case determined in France, in which, it was claimed, an aerolite found by a peasant was held out to be the property of the proprietor of the field, but that of the peasant who picked it up. This reference, the Iowa court held to be entitled to slight, if any consideration, the information concerning it being too meagre to indicate the trend of legal thought.

Gregg Stages A Comeback

Vean Gregg Needed Money, So Went To Work In Minors and Then Returned to Major League.

By Telegraph to The Freeman, New York, April 10.—Baseball has had not a few notable cases of men, seemingly passed, who later found the path to which Ponce de Leon searched in vain. There is for example, Babe Adams, of the Pirates, who was sent out to the minor leagues after he was deemed to have run out his string on the big time and subsequently returned to pitch better ball than ever before. Another case is that of Jack Four-man. This gentleman today is one of the great stars of all baseball. Yet it was only a few years ago, after a journey had survived a baseball season that he was about to be washed into the outer darkness.

The Cards had placed him on the market and the Yankees claimed him by waivers, with the intention of using him in a deal with a minor league club.

Former Did.

The Dodgers, however, needed a first baseman and thought Fourman would do. He did.

But, to my mind, the case that wins the leather pork chop is furnished by Vean Gregg, back with a world's championship outfit at the age of 40, after being almost forgotten by the changing generation of fans. Gregg was a star left-hander with the Cleveland Indians of about fifteen years ago.

He didn't last long, however; at least not on that occasion. After several years at the top of his stride, he lost effectiveness and passed from immediate view. He was next seen with Connie Mack's terrible Athletics of their post-championship era and did nothing of moment.

In fact, Gregg seemed like one of baseball's old men in 1917, and it was not surprising that the major leagues saw little of him. Mack planned to use him as a general supervisor of pitchers, but the role didn't appeal to Gregg. He went back to his farm, and baseball knew him not for several years.

Not Dead One.

But the good did not always die young and Vean was far from a dead one. Back he came again, this time with the Pacific Coast League. Why did he make the attempt? Gregg answered the question at the Senators training camp at Tampa with his customary frankness: "The farm didn't pay my oatmeal bills. I needed the money."

The result of this problem in economics found Gregg in Seattle for the 1924 season, where he just about left-handed the club into the penitentiary and himself into the major leagues.

By the way, where is Eddie Plank and why?

THE WHY, WHEN AND WHERE OF FASHIONS

Taffeta—Its Revival and Origin.

The revival of taffeta is only another phase in the cycle of history of this silk, which, since the Crusades, was alternately popular or neglected in Europe. There is hardly another silk which has been used for so many different things than taffeta. The fabric which was known during the middle ages under this name, was, however, rather stout and stiff—quite different from the taffeta of today.

Chaucer, toward the end of the XIV century, mentions that the gown of the "doctour of phisike" was lined with taffeta. In 1461, when Charles VII of France lay on his bier, his shirt was of changeable taffeta, and his coat lined with scarlet taffeta from Florence. His son, Louis XI, wore a long black taffeta scarf hanging from his hat. Charles VIII, in 1591, had eight turban-shaped night-caps made of black taffeta to keep his locks in order while asleep.

There was so much money going out of the country for this type of silk, that in 1518 France prohibited the importation of scarlet dyed or gold embroidered taffeta. Merchants had to get rid of their stocks inside of six months. Writing around 1530, Rabelais mentions wide taffeta skirts of white, red, tan, gray, and other colors and bodices of same, embroidered with silver. By 1548, velvet and satin displaced taffeta among people of fashion.

About 1620, when slits in garments were the style, taffeta skirts appeared again, and 10 years later changeable taffeta skirts for women. During the first decade of the XVIII century, women usually wore large taffeta scarfs for protection against rain and sun, and about 1740, even mittens were made of white taffeta, to go with the wide pagoda sleeves.

Mrs. Maldero fled to the street as the men closed in combat. She heard two shots. An instant later Diego staggered from the house and fled with a crowd led by Mrs. Maldero in pursuit. Then he collapsed.

Animals Fight Like Men

The armaments of animals are strikingly like those used by man. There are few means of offense and defense used by soldiers that are unlike what may be found in the animal and also the insect kingdom. A study of the methods of defense among animals is most interesting and instructive. Nature's habit of using the fighting instinct of animals as one of the greatest means for the development and the survival of species must be combated before even the fighting instinct in man is quenched.

Strong for Honor System

It was proposed to establish the honor system in a large eastern penitentiary. The matter was put up to the prisoners themselves, it being figured that they would know better than anyone else whether they could play the game honorably. It was put to a vote.

"Hey, Mulier," said one tough citizen to another, "did yer vote for the honor system?"

"Sure, kid, four times,"—Jackson Gassette.

Sleep Called Unnecessary

Martineti, a celebrated Futurist in Italy has renewed the argument as to whether sleep is essential to human life. He maintains it is not, although there is no evidence that he does not indulge himself with it. In his opinion, real progressiveness of the future must fight all forms of rest and banish sleep. He declares that a sleepless life will ultimately be the only joyous one.

World's Deepest Well

The deepest well in the world was completed recently by engineers near Larrabee, Pa., when they struck natural gas at a depth of 7,425 feet, or almost one and one-half miles, says Popular Science Monthly. Work on the well was begun in 1912, and drilling continued for 30 months. The gas is now flowing at a rate of 300,000 cubic feet a day. The cost of sinking the well was about $200,000.

THE AMERICAN LEGION

HE IS RE-ELECTED OVER HIS PROTEST

E. P. Armstrong, national vice commander of the American Legion, is of the type of men which believes in getting things done. And he believes that the way to get things done is, forsooth, to go and do them.

It is that driving power which has carried him from commander of his post to a re-election, to commander of his department, to a re-election over his protest, to a choice as national vice commander of the Legion. Those who have been closely associated with him in his home department of Connecticut, who have seen him work and observed the enthusiastic, compelling way in which he works, say that every Legionnaire in Connecticut loves him.

In four years of Legion work Armstrong has given largely of his time and energy and services to the cause of bettering the lot of men who returned from the war as physical wrecks. After he had been drafted as commander of Corporal post at Waterbury in 1922, he made the care of the disabled his first concern. Conditions were bad then and were complicated by serious unemployment. With others, Armstrong helped to find jobs for 1,000 jobless veterans. He found time in the midst of this activity to make his post the largest in the state.

Re-elected, Armstrong organized a Legion band. He started a post newspaper. He aided materially in securing a Legion home for service men at Waterbury, worth $100,000. Then he was elected department commander. He took a leave of absence from the Scovill Manufacturing company to devote himself exclusively to Legion work.

Great strides in helping the disabled in Connecticut were made under his inspiration and guidance. He organized 14 new posts and brought his department from forty-fifth to second in percentage of membership gain over the preceding year. He made a speaking tour of the state on behalf of the Legion program, delivering from one to four speeches daily for forty-five days. Then after three nights of rest, he was off again, this time on a seventy-two-day schedule. He visited every post in his department and a number of cities where posts were being organized.

At the annual department convention last fall Armstrong was re-elected. He had made strenuous protest. But the delegates staged a demonstration for him in Wild West style and put him back in his job. At the national convention in St. Paul in 1924 he was chosen as one of the five national vice commanders. He resigned as department commander in order to devote himself to his work in the national field. And now he is busy again with his work for the disabled, devoting himself to the American Legion endowment fund for the disabled and the orphans of the war.

Subject Announced for National Essay Contest

The subject of the American Legion national essay contest for 1923 for American school children was announced recently by national headquarters of the Legion at Indianapolis. The subject is:

"Why has the American Legion, an organization of veterans of the World war, dedicated itself, first of all, to uphold and defend the Constitution of the United States of America?"

The contest is open to all boys and girls between the ages of twelve and sixteen, inclusive.

Prizes of $750, $500 and $250 for first, second and third places, respectively, have been offered. The cash prizes shall be used only for scholarships in recognized colleges to be chosen by the winners. Medals are also given to winners.

State and county school officials will cooperate with the Legion in conducting the contest.

DUMB SINCE 1870 MAN NOW SPEAKS

Ether, in Operation, Removes Inhibitions and Patient Talks Fluently.

New York.—A remarkable example of the strange workings of the subconscious mind was revealed when Lincoln Schindler, a deaf mute for 55 years, burst into fluent speech as he emerged from the influence of ether, after an operation at Bellevue hospital.

Schindler is sixty, an engraver, and lives at No. 224 East Seventy-fifth street. None of his friends ever had heard him speak a word and he said, after suddenly regaining the power of speech, he had been utterly mute since he was five years old.

Several days ago he was taken to Bellevue suffering from a tumor of the neck, and Doctors Sutton and Bromberg decided to operate.

Silent During Operation.

During the actual operation he was in a complete repose, but as he began to regain consciousness words poured from his lips.

"Bring Doctor Bromberg!" he cried. "I want to tell him what he has done for me. It is wonderful. I can talk."

When Doctor Bromberg entered the patient thanked him effusively.

The man's vocal cords had not been touched during the operation, and the case was without precedent. Doctor Bromberg feared that after the effects of the ether had completely worn off the man might relapse into unintelligible mumbling.

However, five hours later, Schindler still was talking, and it seemed certain he had permanently regained his voice.

A third physician explained the case. This doctor, who has been in intimate touch with the patient, said:

"It is a phenomenal case of the operation of the subconscious mind. A study of the case reveals that, even as a boy of two or three years, this man was extraordinarily shy and self-conscious. His own voice frightened him and he avoided speech whenever possible."

"During the year, between four and five, he lapsed into long periods of silence, allowing whole days to pass without talking."

All a Delusion.

"And by the time he was five he had deluded himself into the belief that he could not talk at all. It was auto-suggestion, self-hypnotism of the most active kind."

"After that time he never talked, and he began to delude himself into the belief that he could not hear. From that time he went on under the impression that he was a deaf mute. Actually, he heard every word spoken in his presence. And he used ordinary words in the train of his thoughts. But the words he heard with his ears did not penetrate into his conscious mind. Psychologically, he did not hear at all."

"The ether did nothing but break down his inhibitions, release his subconscious mind and return him to the condition of a normal individual."

Mr. Schindler lives with his wife and daughter. The wife is deaf and speaks with difficulty. Her affliction is the result of spinal meningitis, suffered in childhood. According to the daughter, there were rare occasions when her father spoke among the family, but his words were so indistinct as to be understood with difficulty and outside the family circle he invariably used a pen and pencil for conversation.

The daughter, as well as Mr. Schindler's three other children, is perfectly normal.

CHINESE WINS RACE TO BUY LUSTROUS PEARL

On the Way to Port With the Jewel Valued at $500,000 France When European Buyers Arrive.

Papeete, Tahiti.—What undoubtedly is the largest and most valuable pearl ever discovered in the south Pacific was brought to Tahiti from the Gambier Islands in January. Its weight is 264 carats. The coloring is brilliant, with green and golden hues predominating. One hemisphere of the pearl is marked by two distinct iridescent bands, which give the jewel, on that side, something of the appearance of the planet Saturn encompassed by its rings.

When the news of the finding of this pearl reached Tahiti, the European buyers who make Papeete their headquarters during the diving season, chartered schooners to take them to the Gambiers, distant nearly 1,000 miles, only to find on their arrival there that the pearl was at sea in the possession of a Chinese trader, who had purchased it from the native diver and was bringing it to Tahiti. The price paid to the native is said to have been 110,000 francs. Experts at Papeete who have examined the jewel appraise its value at from 500,000 to 1,000,000 francs.

An unusual number of fine pearls have been found in the islands during the diving season just past. Lagoons closed for many years had been opened for diving, and it was from them that the most valuable pearls were taken.

Many years ago the Gambier Islands were a center of great importance in the South seas. From the lagoons came the most valuable shell and the choicest pearls. That was before the days of restriction on pearl diving and the lagoons were stripped year after year until they became fished out and trade drifted to other quarters.

During the last ten or fifteen years the Gambiers have been the least visited islands in the eastern Pacific.

Bored British Society Girl Tries Simple Life

London.—Because she was bored with London dances, theaters and dinner parties, Miss Vera Pragnell, twenty-eight-year-old daughter of the late Sir George Pragnell, wealthy linen merchant, gave away her fortune and retired to a tiny plot of ground in Sussex, near Chantebury Ring, where she has founded a small community of "back-to-the-landers."

There are about a dozen people in the colony, one an atheist, another a communist and a third a poet. All are artistically inclined, and make their living by handwork and cultivation of the soil.

Twenty acres have been set aside as common land, upon which has been erected a "guest house" that not only serves as a general community center, but also as a haven of refuge for weary tramps. Each night food is placed in a special room known as the "tramps' room," and as there are no locks or bolts, passing wanderers have no difficulty in getting board and lodging.

Miss Pragnell lives in a small hut in the center of the common ground, and a broken-down motor omnibus has been converted into a school building for the children of the colony.

Cattlemen Passing, Texas Report Shows

San Antonio, Texas.—The cattlemen, long a colorful figure in the life of the West, is slowly passing. If the membership roll of the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers' association may be taken as an indication.

The association suffered a loss of 680 members during the last year, the annual report of its executive committee, submitted to the association convention which opened a three-day session here, showed. The report adds: "A large number of members were lost because they retired from the cattle business."

But the business is still a big one, as the report shows there are 2,294 members who tend to 1,280,000 head of cattle. Two hundred and ten members were added during the year.

Consumption of beef is shown to have increased slightly during the year, while the consumption of meat as a whole is reported to have declined about one pound per capita.

Oil Ventures Profitable, Argentina Digs for More

Buenos Aires.—The satisfactory results obtained by the state-owned petroleum wells in 1922 have encouraged the government to give additional impulse to boring in 1923. In the Comodoro Rivadavia field alone 136 wells will be sunk this year, while in the Salta and Jurujuy oil fields a considerable number of borings will be begun.

In other respects also great strides will be made, especially in the installation of refineries, the most important of which, at La Plata, is fast approaching completion.

Shingled-Haired Girls Catch Colds in Necks

London.—Doctors of the hair-bobbing fashion now are complaining of "shingled headache." This is nothing but a form of neuralgia, medical men say, caused by sudden chilling of the nape of the neck, which is thus exposed to the cold, blustering winds. Hats which fit closely and very low at the back are said to be an effective safeguard.

Shoe Requires Much Work

In making an ordinary shoe today there are 124 machine operations, performed upon 124 machines, and 246 hand operations, or altogether 370 processes by a group of skilled workmen.

Detroit Is Richest City in the World

Detroit, Mich.—The government's income tax returns show that Detroit is the richest city in the world, having the highest per capita income and the highest per capita of property valuation.

In the actual amount paid to Uncle Sam last year Detroit's total is only exceeded by that of New York, but in the per capita amount there is scarcely any comparison. Detroit paid a total of over $207,000,000, while New York's tax bill was $306,738,000. Chicago's total was $8,000,000 behind Detroit, and Philadelphia was a poor fourth with $164,504,047.

But it was in the per capita figures that Detroit's supremacy was shown. The figures were $208 for Detroit, against $90 for Philadelphia, which ranked second, and $73 for Chicago. Detroit's per capita valuation is $208, New York's is $64.

The chief factor in Detroit's tremendous wealth is, of course, the automobile industry. The Ford company paid $14,419,673 in income taxes, Henry Ford paid $2,477,844, and Edsel Ford paid $1,534,234.

Hard Necessity Ties the Hands of Genius

There was a time, many years ago, when men of genius wrought in marble and in bronze things of beauty that have endured and will endure as standards of excellence. Others of their kind did magic work with brush and all alike were free to lavishly their souls. Their genius was not throttled by anxieties concerning food and rent and clothing. The church of some head of a state fed them.

In later times a nation was wise enough to select men of promise and provide them with bread and butter in order that the whole of their energies might be devoted to research. The nation became the wonder of the modern world.

Men of medicine complain that pathology has not kept pace with the world. The fault is not that of medical men. But few of these are free to solve mysteries. The man who might solve the riddle is attending a case of measles or giving harmless pills to some commonplace nervous in order to keep the wolf from his door.

Genius is not dead. It is but confined to the world's necessities in an effort to appease the landlord. It is engaged in the birthright for a cabbage stew, and because its soul is sick, but because its stomach is empty.

mortal lives that would sing through the ages in writing impudent couplets to be used as talismans in cheap magazines. The children need new shoes. The man who might be painting the landscapes of Corot and catching the ripple of a morning breeze in a word or revealing the souls of men in portraits is doing a cover for a magazine or illustrating the advertisements of silk stockings and hardware.

Genius is not dead. It merely lies dormant while men beat themselves to keep one jump ahead of the bill collector.—Boston Transcript.

"Flock of Beautiful Birds"

New York, paradoxical in this as in everything else, is at once the most hospitable of cities and one of the hardest places in the world to get to know people.

There is in the atmosphere a restlessness, a swirling vivacity, which makes the people of New York find pleasure in movement rather than in concentration. When the more staid Bettelheim goes to one of these parties she is apt to feel like some one stranded on the shore of a lake while a flock of beautiful birds wheel crying around her, writes Rebecca West in the New Republic.

The American woman, who always looks very smart and graceful in motion, because of the slenderness of the wrists and ankles, dart up to one and deliver shrill, sharp, surprising comments, often flattering opinions of one's appearance, which are, if one is honest, much more delightful than embarrassing. If they think you have beautiful eyes, or that you dress well, they say so, and they will dart away, while others dart up to take their place.

This goes on and on, hour after hour, and yet the women never get haggard with fatigue, just as the men who are with them never seem to want to stop dancing.

Putting Nature to Work

Ever since the first man peered fearfully down into the chasm of the first volcano and shuddered at its heat it has been a forward-looking dream to harness this power. Some do it.

There is a super-heated, 220-degree spring at Vale, Ore., that could steam locomotives for even crack trains like the Empire State express. Soles, Idaho, is largely heated by natural hot water; in sunny weather one may follow the buried hot water pipes directed all over town, into thousands of houses. The Idaho mountain town of Shalaby has two water supplies: a cold spring for summer use, and a piping hot, non-freezing spring to which one can winter.

At Klamath Falls, Ore., almost within gunshot of where Captain Jack and his Modocs did such terrible things to the houses on one of the fine residential hills. The hot water is individual property, like soil fertility or trees; each homeowner has his own hot well, and he never needs a fire except for cooking.—Charles J. Lisle in Collier's.

Shanks and I Hate Rabbits

W. Kenneth Cuyler, of the zoology department of the University of Texas, having completely lost his sense of smell, has taken advantage of this unusual condition and hunted and studied rabbits for many years. He finds they are easily tamed and make fine mountaineers. Besides this, they eat all sorts of things, from roots, berries and insects to birds and eggs, and sometimes rival the porcupine in their ability to rub the chicken roost. The mountaineer who efficiently defends the trunk from most people is manufactured by two egg-shaped glands with contractile walls which can force out juice in any direction, even directly over the head of the trunk. These jets break up into a fine spray and can reach an object as distant as 20 feet. Mr. Cuyler says rabbits are usually born to waste their strength and therefore do not discharge it prematurely, but only when cornered and irritated. For removing skunk odor, Mr. Cuyler suggests washing in grating or ammonia water, or in water containing a few drops of carbolic acid and oil of wintergreen. A much more effective method, which he regularly uses, is to hold face and hands or clothing for a few minutes in the thick, heavy smoke produced by placing green juniper branches on a good fire.

The Shot Direct

Mr. Brown and Mr. Stoddy were business associates, but chance had placed them on the same board of directors.

One day, after a meeting, Mr. Brown was holding forth.

"There are hundreds of ways of making money," he said, provocatively. "You" put in Mr. Stoddy, "but only one honest way."

"What way's that?" asked Mr. Brown, sharply.

"Ah!" returned Mr. Stoddy. "I thought you wouldn't know it!"

Legion Awards Excavation Work

B. M. S. Transportation Company Awarded Excavation Contract for American Legion Home—Public Appeal for Funds to Start May 18.

A meeting of the building committee of Kingston Post, No. 159, American Legion, was held Thursday evening, at which time the contracts for excavation for the Legion Home were opened and discussed. The bids varied very considerable in amount and after all had been considered it was decided to award the contract to the B. M. S. Transportation Company. This company is prepared to go to work immediately and rush the work to completion.

The date for the public appeal for funds for the construction of the building was set, May 18 being selected as the opening date. A campaign will be conducted for perhaps ten days during which the Legion and the Auxiliary expect to secure pledges sufficient to carry out the building program.

An extension of time was granted contractors in which to submit bids for construction. Bids had been advertised for and were to close on April 14. Some of the contractors were unable to complete their bids and submit figures by that time and an extension until noon on April 18 was deemed advisable.
